Overview (all sources at the bottom)

	Red	Black	Blue	Bronze	Green	Storms
Names	Red, Ruby, Crimson, Vermillion, Scarlet	Obsidian, Black, Onyx, Sable, Ebony	Cyan, Azure, Sapphire, Cobalt, Cerulean.	Copper, Bronze, Gold	Green, Emerald, Viridian,	Nether, Primal, Thorignir
Leaders	Alexstrasza	Neltharion → Ebyssian	Malygos → Kalecgos	Nozdormu	Ysera → Merithra	Vyranoth
Suffix	-strasza ♀, -strasz ♂	-ian/-ion♂, -ia ♀	-gos ♂, -gosa♀	-dormu/-ormu ♂, -dormi/-ormi ♀	-ra ♀, -us♂	See Storm flight section
Visages	Humans, Elves, Goblins, Tauren, very rarely orcs.	Humans, Goblins, Orcs, Blood elves.	Humans, Gnomes, Elves, Trolls	High elves & Humans mostly.	Night Elves, Trolls, Tauren, High Elves.	See Storm Section
Colors	Red, Pink, Orange, Light purples.	Dark purple, Black, Grey, Dark brown.	Cyan, Turquoise, Blue, Sky blue, Azure.	Gold, Bronze, Brown, Yellow.	Green, Emerald, Lime, Teal.	N/A
Unique Skills	Can perform powerful Necromancy	Experimentation, Citadels, Armor, etc	Can sense leylines.	Created the Caverns of Time	Closest to Death	N/A
Major Roles	Lead the charge against Galakrond, Gave the okay to take primalist eggs.	Created the Dracthyr, Created the Dark heart, and Dragon soul.	Put the Dracthyr in Stasis, Created the magic needed for Visages.	Put the Primal Incarnates into stasis, Foresaw the war in multiple timelines.	Suggested the idea of Visages, created portals to the Dream, Put Fyrakk to sleep.	Combined forces of the Netherwing, Storms dragons, and Primal dragons.
Territories	Waking Shores, Vermillion redoubt, Dragonblight.	Waking Shores, Zaralek Caverns, Dragonblight, Burning Steppes, Searing Gorge	Dragonblight, Coldarra, Azure Span, Crystal song forest, azuna.	Dragonblight, Tanaris, Thaldraszus, their own planes.	Emerald Dream, Val'sharah, Moonglade, Feralas, Swamp of Sorrows, Ohn'ahran plains.	Northrend, Netherstorm, Blades edge mountains, Stormheim, Dragon isles.
Seats	Ruby Lifeshrine/ Ruby lifepools	Obsidian Citadel, Black Dragonshrine	Nexus, Azure Archives	Caverns of Time, Temporal Conflux	Eye of Ysera	N/A

Things that are underlined do not have solid sources and are just speculation.

Note: A dragons suffix is based on their flight however it is still ultimately their choice in both name and visage, as such Chronormu is biologically a male bronze dragon however they choose to represent themselves as Chromie, a female gnome, Ysondre of the Green flight also does not follow the naming convention of female greens. It is unknown if dragons name themselves or are given names, as Wrathion is a unique case where he had no support line and had an unusual upbringing, he can not be used as a point of reference as he most likely named himself or by Fahrad. They are also not limited to visages as while it is entirely up to them and is magic, they can change their visages when it's necessary however as a visage is a powerful spell, it requires energy and can be exhausting especially to older dragons.

Terms;

- Flightmaster - The leader of a small number of dragons (number not specified).
- Flight Commander - Not specified, but they are a higher position than a Flightmaster.
- Wingleader - The primalist version of a Flightmaster.
- Oathstone - An artifact made from the scale of a dragon, usually only given to the most trusted companions of an individual dragon, or to an ally of a flight. Allows a dragon to communicate telepathically to whoever possesses the oathstone and allows them to see through it as well.
- Flight Oathstone - A symbol of power and the sworn oaths of each flight.
- Seasons - How the age of a dragon is measured, 4 seasons = a year. A dragon of no more than 2 seasons is around six months old.
- Visage - The mortal disguise dragons use.
- Close as clutchmates - A term of endearment, akin to people calling their friends brother/sister despite no blood relations.
- Clutchmate/ clutch-sister/ clutch brother - Blood siblings ex: Alexstrasza and Ysera being sisters by blood. Iridikron and Ikronia being brother and sister by blood.
- Frostscales (Vyranoth soldiers), Rock Furies (Iridikron soldiers), Magmatalons (Fyrakk Soldiers),

Stages:

Egg → Whelp → Drake → Dragon → Wyrm

Notes: A dragon reaches maturity at 10 years old, the term "Drake" can be used to reference adolescents AND young adults, Dragon is usually used for older dragons (ex Merithra, Kalecgos, Ebyssian, etc) while Wyrm is for the oldest ones (ex Alexstrasza, Ysera, Tyanastrasz, etc), It should also be noted that Nether dragons age faster and are unstable so the "drake" stage encompasses a larger portion of their life, they possibly do not have a wyrm stage due to their shorter lifespans. As Wrathion is over the age of maturity, he is considered a young adult at this point (approx. 16 years old) and can still be called a drake, During Warcrimes he would have been considered an adolescent.

Red Dragonflight

Red dragons, led by Queen Alexstrasza, are the protectors of life on azeroth which is not to be confused with the Greens being charged with protecting nature. Many are confused as to why the Reds do not end the Alliance vs Horde war, or stop the Dark iron dwarves and it is because not only is it not their place but it is also not the point of their charge, by protecting life they mean to protect all life from major threats such as the Incarnates, Deathwing, the Burning Legion, etc, these are threats to ALL life. Queen Alexstrasza had two named consorts; Tyranasztrasz, one of the oldest, largest, wisest of the dragons, as a primal dragon he was brown in color but when ordered he became a blood red. When the majority of the red dragonflight was captured after the dragonmaw followed a wounded red to their largest base, Tyranastrasz was also captured via the use of the Demon Soul, Tyranastrasz was already very old at this time and between having his power drained, forced to yield via the Demon Soul, and forced to mate with Alexstrasza multiple times, he had fallen severely ill and finally perished when he attempted to fend off Deathwing when he came to steal Alexstraszas eggs. Korialstrasz became her new prime consort, He alongside Rhonin freed Alexstrasza while Ysera, Nozdormu, and Malygos fought Deathwing. After being freed, Queen Alexstrasza fled with her flight into hiding, the shattering of the Demon soul had returned the powers to the dragons but as a result they required rest, the Reds more than most. Korialstrasz met his end when he discovered that the majority of red eggs in the Ruby Dragonshrine were corrupted and he decided to sacrifice himself to destroy all the eggs, he was accused in death of being an agent of the Twilights and intentionally killed innocent whelps, this left Alexstrasza in despair and caused her to shatter the Wyrmrest Accord and she flew to desolace where she waited to die. Thrall helped prove that Korialstrasz did not kill the eggs without reason and renewed the life of Alexstrasza.

Red Dragons care for living beings the most, and as a result they hate the Undead, despite this Red dragons are capable of Necromancy and tend to be more proficient at it among other aspects of death such as ensuring that corpses can not return to life, or cleansing corruptions of death, this aspect of life giving is one they do not enjoy as it goes against the very thing they swore to protect. During the trial against Garrosh, Queen Alexstrasza had claimed that she would forgive the dragonmaw if they came to her and earnestly apologized to her, this sentiment is not being expanded on in terms of her flight, it is unknown if the rest of the red dragons share her views or not.
Red dragons due to their charge are the flight most azerothians would encounter however despite their nature one should still approach a red with respect, if approaching a red near Grim Batol or you're an orc then approach with caution.

Some red dragons have very clear naming inspirations while others don't, usually those of importance to lore have more thought put into their names, please note that this is what I personally interpret their name origins as, I can be completely wrong.

Alexstrasza - Alexandrite, Alexandria (Egypt).
Tyranastrasz - Tyrant, Tyrannos. Both possibly referring to his size and position in the flight.
Korialstrasz - Possibly Coral.
Aurastrasza - Aura.
Daenistrasz - Daenerys Targaryen
Rheastrasza - Mother Goddess of Greek Mythology.

When it comes to having a Red dragon companion, or character you must keep in mind how they will react to the world, events, what they have been through, etc.and how it conflicts or aligns with their morals, Important events to keep note of in lore are;

- Alexstrasza agreeing to have abandoned primal eggs to be taken from the nests to be ordered, which escalated to any unattended eggs, this led to Vyranoth joining the incarnates and escalating tensions.
- The red dragonflight attempts to subdue Wrathion after forcing his mother to lay eggs, then experimenting on the eggs and trying to bring Wrathion back to Vermillion Redoubt.
- The vast majority of the red dragonflight being imprisoned.
- Alexstrasza not wanting to kill Fyrakk the first time despite him and Raszageth antagonizing everyone.
- The potential trauma stemming from being imprisoned, betrayed by Neltharion, betrayed by Malygos, etc

Black Dragonflight

Black dragons led by Ebyssian, and formerly led by Neltharion, are the Earth warders, they protect and monitor the deepest reaches of the planet as well as its surface. The flight was formerly only black dragons however in his madness, Neltharion and his offsprings created multiple branches of flights both directly and indirectly, they are responsible for the death of Tiffin Wrynn, among other events such as the creation of the Dark Heart, Demon Soul, Dracthyr, etc.Neltharion was once a respected wyrm, he had kinship in Malygos who both at times had more extreme ideas, he was close to Alexstrasza as well through him her thoughts were spoken albeit in a harsher manner, he was often brutally honest and although this created tension, he was not wrong. Ebyssian later became the new aspect after both Wrathion and Sabellian forfeited their claims, Ebyssian was of Neltharions clutch and remained untouched by corruption via the Hammer of Khaz'goroth protecting Highmountain from the corruption of the old gods, he was raised by Huln Highmountain and became a Spiritwalker to guide all future Highmountains. Years later Neltharion, now Deathwing flew through the dark portal with his son and lieutenant, Sabellian with a large portion of their clutches, Deathwing lost the battle against the sons of Lothar and fled Draenor, when Draenor shattered Sabellian saved what he could, with the less fortunate black dragons becoming the Nether dragonflight. More years later, a red dragon Rheastrasza captures Nyxondra and experiments on her eggs in an attempt to find a way to remove the corruption from the black dragons, with the help of an adventurer she succeeds but the egg is later taken to Vermillion Redoubt and then stolen by Ravenholdt and kept in their basement, this egg later hatches into Wrathion, the Black Prince. With the help of a rogue, Wrathion eliminates both his flight father and every known black dragon on azeroth, two years later Wrathion arrives on pandaria and meets Anduin Wrynn, this interaction between a young and considerably impressionable Wrathion helped give him insight however it was debatably the wrong insight. During the end of Garroshs trial Wrathion and Kairozdormu helped Garrosh escape to an alternate Draenor.

Black dragons were seen as extremely honorable dragons before corruption however after they became corrupted, the flight had become volatile even amongst themselves; Sintharia, prime consort to Neltharion became eternally scarred with ever burning claw marks after unfortunately surviving mating with him after his body started to break apart, Nefarion resurrecting his own sister, Sintharia plotting against the rest of the flight and Neltharion.

Despite Ebyssian, Wrathion, and Sabellians work to reestablish the black dragonflight post corruption, the stigma and trauma inflicted onto the world still exists, while some hold out hope for the flight and know that the three heads can be trusted, it does not immediately remove centuries of destruction caused by their flight.

This is what I personally interpret their name origins as;

Neltharion, Nefarion - Nefarious
Sintharia - Sinister
Onyxia - Onyx
Nyxondra - Greek personification of Night
Wrathion - Wrath
Sabellian - Sable
Ebyssian - Abyss, Ebony

When it comes to having a black dragon companion, or character you must keep in mind how they will react to the world, events, what they have been through, etc.and how it conflicts or aligns with their morals, Important events to keep note of in lore are;

- Creating the Demon soul which took power from all the flights excluding the black.
- Sundering the world once again.
- Assisting in the imprisonment of the Red dragonflight.
- Infiltration of Stormwind which resulted in the death of Tiffin Wrynn, splitting Varian into two people.
- Experimentation of all dragons and mortal races.
- Corruption from the old gods.

Blue Dragonflight

Blue Dragons formerly led by Malygos, and currently led by Kalecgos are charged with the guarding of magic, they protect the important ley lines of the world, and ensure magic does not fall into the wrong hands. Malygos was one of the original aspects, a light blue primal dragon ordered by the titans, he was close with Neltharion and had considerably played a very large part in the first war against the Primalists; He enchanted the jewelry of the Aspects, opened portals, assisted with creating visages, erected massive magical wards, Malygos was very much ready for war, he was fast with his ideas. Upon the betrayal of Neltharion, Malygos and the blue flight was nearly completely destroyed after they tried to stop him, Sindragosa was thrown far north, severely injured in now Icecrown, she tried to make her way to Dragonblight knowing, she called out for Malygos on deaf ears, she died before she could make it to Dragonblight and cursed Malygos, and the living, the Blue dragonflight remnants being driven mad by the event and even madder by mortals meddling with magic. Kalecgos eventually became the new aspect with help of his friends, with his rise to power, the blues would separate, a flight only by the color of their scales rather than their closeness, Kalec frequented the company of both dragon and mortals and was a lot more friendlier than his predecessor, this friendliness extended to Jaina Proudmoore, who he eventually became romantically involved with. This relationship eventually ended as a result of Jaina nearly destroying Orgrimmar but they still remained on friendly terms. When the Dragon isles reawakened Kalecgos and the simulacrum of Sindragosa managed to gather the remaining heads of the blue dragonflight including the old wyrm Senegos who saw the unification of the blues before his eventual peaceful passing.

The Blues had caused less destruction than the Blacks however they still caused terror amongst magic users, as such they too have stigmas to work through however as too with the blacks, the new aspect of magic will surely make that road less rocky to travel down.

This is what I personally interpret their name origins as;
Sindragosa - Sin
Malygos - Malicious, Malignant
Stellagosa - Star
Cyanigosa - Cyan
Hexigosa - Hex
Sapphiron - Sapphire

When it comes to having a blue dragon companion, or character you must keep in mind how they will react to the world, events, what they have been through, etc.and how it conflicts or aligns with their morals, Important events to keep note of in lore are;

- The betrayal of Neltharion and the trauma it inflicted.
- The madness of Malygos.
- The terror of an undead Sindragosa.
- The death of a majority of the blue flight.
- The blues attempted to hoard all of the magic on azeroth which resulted in them waging war against both mortals and Wyrmrest accord.
- The slow reunification of the Blues.

Green Dragonflight

Led by Merithra, and formerly by Ysera, the Green dragonflight is charged with protecting the natural world as well as the Emerald dream. Ysera, the sister of Alexstrasza and the cousin of Fyrakk, was always one to avoid fighting and preferred to lull her enemies into a deep sleep. She of the Dream and her flight are like the Reds in that they value life, however unlike the reds, the Greens are more likely to confront threats and be “aggressive” they will not act with violence but they are less lenient to disturbances compared to their sibling flight. Upon the death of Ysera, Merithra had inherited her position as aspect however Merithra was noticeably less confident in her leadership skills especially with how sudden the death of Ysera was, as such the green flight was weakened by the death of their aspect and the insecurities of their new one. The green dragonflight holds a strong bond with druids but most of all Night elves, their bond is much deeper than just their shared love of nature; Elune, the one who bestowed her child Cenarius to Ysera to raise, favors the Kaldorei and her precious greens. When Elune sent her beloved children to Ardenweald she did so to help her sister, when that failed she sent her most powerful beasts in Ysera. Ysera is bound to the Winter Queen and can only leave the weald if Malfurion takes her place, this pact is temporary and allows her to move free on Azeroth and guide her daughter Merithra on the path of becoming a worthy Aspect. Green dragons are one of the rarer to spot dragons next to the Bronzes, however one can look towards their territories on Azeroth, you may not see them, but they can see you for they can phase between Dream and the Waking world, and see both.
The Green flight arguably played few roles in major events but when they do appear they make use of their power over the land.

This is what I personally interpret their name origins as;
Aronus - Aroma.
Bromithus - Bromeliad.
Malachisera - Malachite.
Somnikus & Somnus - Somnus, personification of sleep.
Verdisa - Verdant
Viranikus - Viridian

When it comes to having a green dragon companion, or character you must keep in mind how they will react to the world, events, what they have been through, etc.and how it conflicts or aligns with their morals, Important events to keep note of in lore;

- The Emerald Nightmare constantly being a risk for them prior to the death of Xavius.
- The betrayal of Neltharion and the demon soul.
- The imprisonment of Alexstrasza and the red dragonflight.
- The lingering sensitivity to corruption after being freed from the Nightmare.
- The scarcity of green dragons outside of the Dream and non-Druid locations.
- The invasion of Fyrakk and the Dream.
- The sudden corruption and death of their Aspect.

Bronze Dragonflight

Led by Nozdormu, the Bronze flight is charged with protecting the Timeways of their time meaning; They protect the timeline they are in from threats of both their time and alternate timelines, Originally they were not to alter time to fit their desires and they were to only ensure that the past remains untouched by the future however, in recent times Nozdormu has been more open about this. As one of the original Aspects, Nozdormu foresaw multiple outcomes of the first primalist war, and possibly the betrayal of Neltharion, in his early days he did not have much control over the timeways so what he did and didn't see is unknown. In one timeline Nozdormu and his flight had fallen, become corrupted by their own power and attempts to alter the timelines to suit their wants and needs, in this form he is Murozond, all infinites have a similar naming convention as the Bronzes or anagrams of their Bronze counterparts. While the Bronze are the least active in lore, they play a major part in protecting the main timeline and work unseen, however this does not mean they never appear or help others, When Korialstrasz found Malygos' abandoned clutch of eggs, he took the surviving eggs to Nozdormu where they were cared for until the Red flight can take them, when Alexstrasza was bound and being moved from Grim Batol, Nozdormu was there to fend of Deathwing, when the sundering happened Soridormi was there in place of her mate, Soridormi and Chromie are such bronzes that are more willing to interact with mortals than not, but make no mistake, Bronzes are elusive.

This is what I personally interpret their name origins as;

Chromie - Chrome / Chrono
Anachronos - Chronos
Aeonormu - Aeon
Moraidormi - Morai
Eiendormi - Eien
Erozion - Erosion
Eternos - Eternity

When it comes to having a bronze dragon companion, or character you must keep in mind how they will react to the world, events, what they have been through, etc.and how it conflicts or aligns with their morals, Important events to keep note of in lore;

- They have been very rarely seen up until Dragonflight.
- They tend to be more hostile towards outsiders near their territories.
- They are more focused on the timelines than most.
- They probably have an infinite counterpart either wanting to ally with you or kill you.
- Not all infinites followed Eternus and allied themselves with Nozdormu.

Netherwing

Currently led by Karynaku and Neltharaku, the Netherwing flight is one that came from the Black Dragonflight that was placed on Draenor then abandoned by Neltharion. When Draenor shattered, Sabellian protected those he could, those that weren't under his protection either died or became infused with the energies of the nether over time, as a result of being abandoned by their Aspect, bound to serve by the orcs, and the general hostilities of outland, the Netherwing dragons are hostile first and foremost but it is out of defense rather than sheer aggression and when one gains their trust they are loyal to no end. Nether dragons do not live long as they age faster and their energies eventually burn out which leads to their transparency in adulthood and as such, the blue dragon Tyrygosa has spent years trying to find a way to help the nether dragons, her first attempt was to bring them to the Nexus so that they may drink from the energy there however, the nether dragons attempted to take over and was promptly absorbed and destroyed by a maddened Malygos, although this event did open the Blue aspects eyes to the "bigger picture". Mordenaku, the heir to the Netherwing, is one of the kinder ones that adventurers meet as he makes a plead to them to help him free his mother and flight. Years later, Wrathion and Vyranoth had extended a hand to Mordenaku, and invited them to Valdrakken to be a part of the Accord, there the Netherwing made roost in the northern cliffs of Thaldraszus with hope for a better and more safer future for their kind.

This is what I personally interpret their name origins as;
Malfas - Malphas
Onyxien - Onyx / Onyxian
Neltharaku - Neltharion
Barthamus - Barthalomew

When it comes to having a nether dragon companion, or character you must keep in mind how they will react to the world, events, what they have been through, etc.and how it conflicts or aligns with their morals, Important events to keep note of in lore;

- The Netherwing have dealt with endless trauma.
- They have shorter lifespans.
- The Netherwing sometimes struggle with their identity in being Nether dragons, but rooted in being a black dragon.

Naming and extra flavorings

When it comes to naming a dragon companion or character, few dragons don't follow the naming conventions of the main five flights with examples being Grakkarond, Axtroz, Spellmaw, Emeriss, and Narsysx, it is entirely up to you but for the most part, each flight has a suffix based on the last half of their Aspects and consorts with female red dragons having the suffix -strasza and male reds having the suffix -strasz in tone with Alexstrasza and her consorts Tyranastrasz and Korialstrasz. Another small detail about the names of the flight members is that some of the prefixes might sometimes reference people, places, objects, or adjectives such as Sintharia referring to Sin, Nefarian referring to Nefarious, or Somnus being Somnus the Personification of Sleep, it is not necessary to have such things in a name as shown in the examples above but it is good to know in case one needs an outline to go off of. On the case of the Storm flight, led by Vyranoth and made up of primal dragons, thorignir, and nether dragons, this flight does not contain suffix or prefix that matches its aspect as they are made up of minor flights and as such follow their own naming conventions. Primal dragons tend to have more guttural or feral sounding names such as Galakrond, Iridikron, or Raszageth, Thorignir names being based in norse culture, and Nether being based in Black dragon culture or their own.

On other Dragonkin

When it comes to other dragons, one must recognize that sometimes the lack of lore does not mean they are invalid while on the other side of the same coin, the lack of lore means they are just a tool to further the plot. Wylderdrakes and Velocidrakes are considerably canon species of dragon as we see them a part of the world and named, with one in Ironormu having quests and the achievement connected to the slumbering green wylderdrakes.With this Wylderdrakes have slightly more in terms of "canon material" than others but make no mistake, Velocidrakes also have a part in the world and it's entirely up to you as blizzard intended. Regarding other species introduced with Dragonflight like the Slitherdrake, it is difficult to place them in the world when it comes to canon lore as Blizzard did not mention them when it came to Wylderdrakes and Velocidrakes as mentioning Slitherdrakes would spoil an at the time future patch, and after their relevant quests they are nowhere to be seen. At the end of the day if you do not wish to follow canon then you do not have to, if you think slitherdrakes wasn't a plot device then they don't have to be. My general rule is that if they do not have any lore or enough lore then it is fair game to make it up.

Fairie dragons are considerably not true dragons and are more or less manifestations of immense magic, they are powerful and tend to play pranks. As far as I am aware they do not have lore regarding them interacting with mortals the same way they do with regular ordered dragons. This is the same case as Cloud serpents in that they are not true dragons and merely look like them, they are the children of Wild God Yu'lon just as wolves are the children of Goldrinn, and elk as well as centaurs are the children of Malorne. The general "rule" is that if it can be tamed then it is a lesser dragonkin and thus not a "true dragon", like Veilwings of Ardenweald.

Old Notes

Cloud serpents have less intelligence than actual dragons HOWEVER they are still as intelligent as Gryphons, Wind riders, and Hippogryphs, few can master speech and those who can are of the Heavenly or Storm variant. Cloud serpents are loyal, and how you raise one will affect it's temperment as an adult however as Cloud serpents do have some form of higher intellegence than a dog , they can change by their own will; A mistreated serpent will grow to be terrible, but a kind hand may change them. Generally speaking, regular Cloud serpents have a fire breath or storm breath. Velocidrakes are large pterodactyl-esque dragons, they can be seen flying around ordered settlements, and assisting the flights in times of battle such as the Assault on the Ruby Life Pools, and the Defense of the Emerald Gardens, they have large talons and their scales can be of the main five flights, or of Teal and White, their intelligence is fully up to the player as it is intended for players to have their own opinions. However it is good to note that there has not been a velocidrake of the main flights with speech, and there is only one named velocidrake, Eragosa at the Azure Archives. The infinite velocidrake in Dawn of the Infinite speaks but it is unknown if this is due to an alternate timeline.

Wylderdrakes are more traditional wyverns as opposed to the Wind riders who are also known as wyverns, with this it is speculated that Wind Riders have come from the same lineage as Wylderdrakes, Their existence is also up to players however it should be noted that Ironormu's true form is never shown but his file shows that he is a wylderdrake, and there are also ten(10) named wylderdrake npcs and four battle pets, the Infinite wylderdrake also speaks. They have no unique colors like the Velocidrakes teal scales. Ironormu could potentially be a sign that non-dragons are capable of speech and free will. According to Little Scales Daycare, Wylderdrakes are not "true dragons" showing that species that isnt ordered or primal, are not seen on the same level. The Slitherdrake is an experiment, an amalgamation of other flights and an abandoned species that come from Zaralek Caverns, Their existence to some extent was used for the sake of the plot as there are no Slitherdrake npcs and they are never mentioned afterwards. Their scales come in more unique colors to reflect their nature. They resemble the Heart of the Aspects; a combination of the aspects powers.

Because there is no established canon for these new dragons or their scales, you have the most amount of freedom for their stories, mixed with the fact that we do have dragons in canon who have shown that they are not forced to carry out their charges, they do have free will and individuals can go off on their own, may they be seen as an outcast? yeah more than likely, but they understand that you can abandon your duties and still have the love of your flight. Your unordered Velocidrake can be a professional yapper of the Red dragonflight despite having teal scales, or they can be a quiet emerald of the green flight.

Colors

On the topic of White scales, Mottled scales, and alternate colors, The Albino Drake mount description shows that DNA tests were done, and it is not related to any known flight, meaning it is not an albino drake, it is potentially it's own sub-flight, this is further proven by White Dragonspawn and Drakonids, it is known that there used to be dragonflights of every color but they were eventually absorbed into the main five flights or disappeared over time after the main five were empowered. The white scales for Dragonriding mounts come from a quest that involves a Silver scale, a sign of unity of the dragons and Tyr. My theory is that the white dragonflight were a few dragons that were empowered as a sort of test run before empowering the main five flights, alas it could very much be that they are as natural as any other dragon and simply survived off of scraps. The Mottled drake mount description is from the perspective of Alexstrasza, she thought the drake was sick however it flew as well as any other healthy drake, and as such the mottling can just be a scale variation as dragons still have genetics and are still subjected to recessive traits. The Lifebinders Hand-maiden and the Blazing drake comes in pink and orange respectively, while it is known among the blues that you have various shades, the other flights are less known for their variation of scale colors, with the Handmaidens pink scales, and the Blazings orange scales, we can now tell that reds are not just ruby. It should be noted that the Blazing drake, while sharing a model with an obviously female drake, does not have any gendered indicators. In War of the scaleborn, we have more varying colors for primals dragons including slate, mottled, brown, ochre, rust, etc and based on lines in the War of the Scaleborn book, Ordering and being infused with primal magic changes ones scale color however it also seems to vary, Tyranastrasz was brown but he became blood red, Raszageth was mottled and dull but became blue and purple like a storm, or Ysera who was light green then her scales became deeper in color.

As Ordering is “Perfections” and/or “Finished”, there are few deviations from the flights main colors, as such the Red dragonflight may have colors within the red color palette and its corresponding colors like Orange, Pinks, etc.

Dragons view on each other

- As mentioned before, The aspects were not close to the incarnates like the cutscene in-game said, in War of the Scalborn the only ones who were close were Vyranoth and Alexstrasza, Neltharion and Iridikron were enemies as quoted from Alexstrasza "...but she knew he was nearly Neltharion's equal in strategy, cunning, and strength. Neltharion and Iridikron had long been rivals." (chapter 2)
- Alexstrasza about Fyrakk "Fyrakk was like a brother to me, but his actions have set him apart, He is different now, Changed."(chapter 2)

- Nozdormu & Alexstrasza about Fyrakk and Raszageth "...Perhaps Fyrakk found joy in battle, but Raszageth derived it from killing…" (oral history of Nozedormu / end of chapter 3)and by Alexstrasza 'Did Vyranoth truly prefer the company of a creature as cruel and as unpredictable as Raszageth?' (chapter 5)

- Malygos about Fyrakk "But opposition rises on swift wings, your own cousin speaks against you." (chapter 2)
- Narration "Ysera leaned closer to her sister, bumping Alexstrasza's shoulder with her snout." (chapter 2)

- Vyranoth about Tyranastrasz 'Vyranoth returned the gesture, careful to keep her expression even. Inside, however, her heart was a maelstrom. To think that a dragon of his stature had accepted the keepers' shackles' (chapter 1).

- Alexstrasza about Neltharion;